The Lisbonaire

City apartments are often bland, characterless affairs – but not this collection of 19 stylish studios and one-bedroom flats housed in a renovated 1960s building. Young Portuguese designers have used the walls as a canvas for cool graphic art inspired by the local area. There's a communal lounge in the basement with a TV and sofas, a small gym and, best of all, a roof terrace – the perfect spot to watch the sun go down over Lisbon's red rooftops. It's located on a quiet street near the starting point of the the Glória funicular, which carries passengers up to the Bairro Alto.
